

ISBT objectives

- To promote and to maintain a high level of ethical, medical and scientific practice in blood transfusion medicine, science and related therapies throughout the world
- To encourage and support the development of collaborative for good practice, particularly in the context of less well developed blood transfusion services
- To make provision for the exchange of views and information between members of the Society and other societies
- To create global and regional opportunities for the presentation of research, new developments and changing concepts in blood transfusion medicine, science and related therapies
- To establish close and mutually beneficial working relationships with relevant and non-governmental organisations, in order to disseminate knowledge of how transfusion medicine and science and related therapies may best serve donors and patients.